The Little House on the Prairie books comprise a series of American children's books written by Laura Ingalls Wilder and published by Harper & Brothers. The books are based on pioneer life in the American Midwest in the late 19th century. Several, including Farmer Boy, On the Banks of Plum Creek, and By the Shores of Silver Lake, are set in Minnesota. The books are largely autobiographical, based on stories told to Wilder's daughter Rose Wilder Lane, and Lane's influence on the books' development is controversial.[1] Eight of the books were published between 1932 and 1943, and the ninth, These Happy Golden Years, was published in 1953. The books have been translated into many languages and were adapted into a popular television series, Little House on the Prairie.
